THE RAYMOND LION

The Raymond Lions Club held their regular meeting at the Opera House on Monday night at 7:30 with 23 members and one guest present. Dee Rolison is a very welcome addition to our Club.

The session was noisy and busy—chiefly as a result of the Tail-Twister and his fun-giving and fund-getting activities. Final tips to Carnival workers were given by Pres. Rayo Woolf. The booths will be built and decorated on Tuesday and Wednesday with all Lions and members of the Athletic Assn. ready to do the job. Tucker Hironaka is the Building Inspector (director) so the job will be done well and on time.

The plans for the big show on Saturday night are going very nicely. M.T. and his good helpers were in Cardston last Saturday and did a good bit of scouting for the Basil Horsfall Singers who present another fine program here on Saturday, Nov. 25, called "A Cavalcade of Song". Many Cardston music lovers are very interested in this fine troupe and their program. Music lovers from Magrath and Stirling will be there too. Local citizens can get their tickets from Della Woolf, Beth Walker or L. L. Harker—do it now, don't miss these fine singers this time.

Lions activities for the winter are stirring along the line. We are invited to the Warner Charter Night celebration next Monday at seven p.m. This Club was sponsored by the local Lions and we hope to have many of our local members there. Thursday night Hill Spring have their Charter Night with our own coming up soon.

Youth at the Wheel

So that the future motorists will have the common courtesies of the road, plus the technical knowledge required for proper car operation, many Lions Clubs are going on record in support of the training program in High Schools.

The program started just a few years ago and is now already firmly established. Colleges have instituted driver training teacher classes as accredited courses, and automobile manufacturers through their dealers have made dual-control cars obtainable in every part of the country.

These courses are an essential part of the education-for-living trend in our schools. Some 4,300 high schools conduct both class-room and behind-the-wheel driver training courses and 3,101 high schools are providing classroom instruction only. Today approximately 600,000 students are so enrolled. It shows what can be done when the public is aroused to do something in a practical way about reducing loss of lives and property due to accidents.

Return Engagement

DEREK MacDERMOT

Baritone with the Basil Horsfall Singers, who are coming here with a brand-new production. Also in the cast are Wini Hutt, mezzo-soprano; Vera Bryson, soprano, and Karl Norman, tenor.

BROADWAY BECKONS
CANADIAN BARITONE

All members of the Basil Horsfall Singers, who are coming back again, have received offers from abroad, and all have participated in important engagements outside of Canada.

Derek MacDermot, baritone, took part last winter in the Broadway show "Regina" which may later be revived and Derek could walk back into his role if he desired.

This popular singer played leading roles last season with Vancouver's famed Theatre Under The Stars, scoring in "Blossom Time", "Sweethearts" and "Chu Chin Chow".

In 1948, shortly after arriving in New York, Derek began studies with Karl Kritz, a conductor and coach with the Metropolitan Opera Company. He also studied with Armando Agnini of the San Francisco Opera Company in operatic acting, preparing himself for sixteen roles in standard operatic repertoire such as "Carmen", "Rigoletto", "Travatore" etc.

In the Spring of 1949 Derek sang in Hadyn's "Creation", also in Mendelssohn's "Elijah" where he shared solos and duets with Thelma Votipka of the Metropolitan Opera Company.

He has appeared on television and did much concert work in New York.

Derek will be heard to splendid advantage in the varied repertoire to be given by the Basil Horsfall Singers in their fine new production "A Cavalcade of Song" which comes to the Opera House on November 25th.

Last Minute Victory

The last three hectic minutes of the ball game saw the Jack's snatch victory from the fingertips of the Magrath Rockets on Monday night with the final score reading 50 to 47. Coach Art Ziehn sparked the local boys, who trailed the Rockets most of the game, in a last ditch stand that proved too much for the Garden City team. Allen West shared top spot with Ziehn by potting 17 points with C. Alston and B. Sabey scoring 11 each for the losers. It was a very good exhibition of basketball with the game well handled by Grant Wheeler and W. Rolfeon.

Comets Win Tanner
Trophy

Friday, November 17 ten worried boys and one coach headed for Cardston to meet the formidable Magrath Zeniths. No one knew what the Zeniths had as far as ball players were concerned and the boys were pretty shaky as they lined up for the jump ball. Thirty minutes later the Comets had somewhat more confidence because of a lead of 28 to 22.

During the next two quarters the boys passed, dribbled, and shot their way to a decisive 66 to 31 win over the Zeniths. Ten relieved boys and one coach went home to bed.

On Saturday they lined up against the Cardston Cougars, who had beaten Lethbridge the night before. The boys weren't half as worried as they had been the night before, but they still worked their hearts out for the Trophy.

During the first quarter the Comets couldn't get clicking as far as scoring was concerned but with a five man zone defence they stopped the Cougars cold.

Five new boys lined up in the second quarter, dropping the zone defence and making point after point. The half time score was 34 to 13. In the third quarter the other five came on again and they began to click. Again the score rose. During the last quarter with the second bunch of boys on again, the ball was worked around making many more points. When the final bell sounded Raymond had recovered the cup by downing the powerful Cougars 81 to 41.

After the game, Gary Salmon, Captain, received the Cup on behalf of the team. He, along with Robert Dahl, also won a coveted position on the All Star Team. These two boys worked hard and deserve all the credit given to them.

The cup has come home again and this time we hope it will remain for three years. If it does, it is ours forever.

The Glee-ette Club met this week at the home of Mrs. Geneva Erickson for their evening of song practice. Mrs. Annie Larsen, as co-hostess assisted with the delicious lunch.

The annual Beet Grower Party will be held December 2nd in the Opera House. All beet growers, their wives and children over 16 are cordially invited.

FUA President Heard

On Saturday afternoon at two o'clock in the Legion Hall, Clifford Dahl, as chairman, called the meeting of the F.U.A. to order to hear talks by C. J. Stimpfle of Edmonton and L. E. Pharis of Magrath.

Mr. Pharis, district representative, director on the F.U.A. Board and former member of the Prices Support Board at Ottawa gave a report on that Board's activities and the recommendations made to the Board. He also stressed the need for a strong local organization.

The object of Mr. Stimpfle's speech was to stimulate an interest in the farmer movement. He said that the government was preparing to discontinue the wheat board and that if this comes about the farmers should be prepared to set up their own boards to handle the various farm products. He pointed out that all other classes put their own price tag on their goods and services but the farmers have no say in the matter of the price of their products.

Both talks were well received by those attending.

A membership committee was appointed with Pete Coppieters as chairman and D. A. Bennet, Ray Depew, Clifford Dahl and D. L. Paxman as members. This committee is to contact all farmers and build up a strong membership. When this canvas is completed a reorganization meeting will be held.

Weddings

Heninger - Isaacson

Marriage vows were exchanged in the Alberta Temple, Wednesday November 15th, when Joy, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Piegrass, became the bride of Willard, the son of Mrs. Elizabeth Heninger and the late John Heninger. Pres. Willard Smith officiated.

The bride was lovely in a gown of traditional white satin which featured a sweetheart neckline and net yoke edged with seed pearls. The hem of her long full skirt was caught up to reveal rows of dainty white lace. Her finger tip veil cascaded from a seed pearl and rhinestone tiara.

Immediate relatives gathered at the home of the bride's parents to extend best wishes and congratulations to the happy couple, and partake of a delicious plate lunch.

The bride chose for her going away ensemble a three piece, grey squirrel trimmed, wine gabardine suit, to which she pinned a beautiful corsage made up of an orchid surrounded by dainty rosebuds.

Out of town guests were from Edmonton, Foremost, Rosemary, Calgary Wrentham and Lethbridge.

They Have Had It—They Hope!

The Ted Meeks home has had its share of tough luck for this century—its occupants hope! They got a new frig. on Saturday night and all went well until about 5 a. m. when a loud blast shook the place. For some unknown reason the gas—sulphur dioxide—in that nice new refrigerator had exploded with such force that it tore a few holes in the body of the unit. Mrs. M. (our heroine) got out of bed and dashed into the kitchen to investigate but couldn't get near the frig because of the gas that billowed forth. She did the next best thing and opened all the doors to allow the room to clear. Considering that it was only ten below they were indeed fortunate that their water pipes were the only things that froze solid. The man who sold the nice new fridge was called in and with the help of Mr. M. carried it out—this was quite a feat 'cause it took five men to get it in. That should have been enough but there is more.

The fire in the monkey stove was rekindled but with the pipes being frozen steam formed instead of the water getting hot and a small explosion in the stove loosened a chimney plug in the kitchen causing a great deal of soot to scatter about the room. The place was really a mess but that was not the end of the trouble.

As Mr. M. was going down stairs he upset a bucket of milk that was waiting to be fed to the pigs, causing just a little more confusion and disarray to an otherwise neatly kept household.

The rubble has been cleared away and after taking stock it was found that the house-plants were the only things that paid the supreme sacrifice but the Meeks family have their fingers crossed against a re-occurrence of that sort of thing—we don't blame them.

Norman Allred is now employed by King Motors.

ROTE SPOKES

An eighty per cent turnout of Rotarians, Monday last, heard Alma Hancock give a vocational talk on the dairy business. It was a thoroughly capable talk, interestingly illustrated with pieces of equipment which Alma thoughtfully provided. His talk was enthusiastically received by the Rotes who now have a sympathetic insight into the problems and worry of providing our town with good, pasteurized milk. Thanks, Alma.

Frank Taylor aroused enthusiasm when he reported that the surveyors had been ordered by the Provincial Government to complete a survey on the Raymond to Craddock road before Christmas this year. This sounds encouraging and it looks like next year we can expect the new grade to be completed straight through from Welling to Craddock. Frank thinks that this move is directly attributable to the Chamber of Commerce resolution introduced at the zone meeting held recently in Lethbridge. One more argument in favor of formation of a Chamber of Commerce in town. Let's follow this up boys.

PEEPS AT THINGS TO COME

Next Monday, November 27th, an inter-club visit at Lethbridge where we will be guests of the Lethbridge Club. Rumor has it that after the meeting we will be conducted on a tour of the No. 8 mine of the Lethbridge Collieries.

December 4th, a talk by Ernie McFarland. He needs no introduction.

December 11th, an educational film—"At Date of Birth" with commentary by officials from the unemployment Insurance Agency of Lethbridge.

Would-Be Fellows Late November was to see a special Committee at work in each of Rotary's 201 Districts. It's job: to select one young man or woman a District's candidate for a Rotary Foundation Fellowship for Advanced Study. The choice of this District candidate was to be made from the many candidates proposed by the Clubs of the District—one per Club. Deadline on naming a Club's candidate to the District Committee was November 15. Deadline on naming the District's candidate to the Secretary of Rotary International was December 10. From all the District candidates the Foundation Fellowship Committee of Rotary International will thereafter make the final choice of Rotary's Fellows for 1951-52.

In the New Yorker magazine we a two-installment profile of Henry Rosenfeld, who probably makes more dresses for more women than any other manufacturer in the world. He quit high school in his junior year. Soon he resolved to be a millionaire at the age of thirty-five, an ambition which was achieved. Currently, according to the article, he draws a salary of $100,000 a year, employs 26 relatives, owns a yacht, plane and convertible, and lives with his wife and two daughters in a six-room $150.00-a-month apartment in the Bronx.

The foregoing was merely of incidental interest to us. What stopped us, as we read the profile, was this statement by Lillian Ross, the author:

"Cud won it," Wheeler's "wrong," a month and was progressing nicely but a sudden and severe heart attack ended the life of a wonderful man that Sunday afternoon.

The very impressive funeral service was held at Claresholm where he had been Bishop for a good number of years, with interment in the family plot in the Claresholm Cemetery. The whole family, with the exception of his daughter Delsie who predeceased him, was present at the funeral.

Mrs. Quist spent a week in Calgary with other members of the family and then accompanied by her daughter, Mrs. Alton Merrill from Parawan, Utah, came down to stay with us for the winter. We were pleased to have Dora stay for a short visit before returning by plane to the States.

A collision occurred this afternoon on the corner one block east of the Broadway Store when a truck driven by Jerry Bartoszek and a car driven by Mrs. Reita Walker met in the intersection. Mrs. Walker was shaken up but no one was seriously injured. No other details are available at the present time.

The Stake M. I. A. Board served a sumptuous banquet to about 250 members of the Special Interest Class, November 15th in the Opera House, after which a very entertaining program was presented with each Ward contributing a number. John Wolsey was the jovial Master of Ceremonies. The rest of the evening was spent in dancing.

Fred Campbell

is an experienced little man as both basketball player and coach of the team. Fred has been making his living both as an active player and a manager in pro sports for the past four years.

Although Fred is short, at an even 6 feet, he's a "big man" on any pro team that he joins. His versatility and knowledge takes care of that.

He hails from Herrin, Illinois—deep in coal-mining country. He led his high school team into the State finals back in 1939 where Herrin lost out to a team led by Andy Phillips, who later gained fame on the Illinois "Whiz Kids". In defeat, it was Fred who gained the plaudits of the newsmen in that game.

From there Fred went to Southern Illinois University at Carbondale. He was a standout for two seasons in both basketball and baseball.

During the war, in the Marine Corps Fred managed a basketball team in the South Pacific that won 47 out of 48 games.

In 1946, Fred joined the Detroit Gems basketball team in the National Basketball League. He was second in scoring on that team. He finished the season as player-coach, and helped King Doring organize the Vagabond Kings for the next season in the same capacity. Last year, again in the National Basketball League with the Kings, Fred was a regular guard and served as a road manager for the team.

Fred's a good shot and rates even higher as a play-maker and field general. He's tops when it comes to defensive basketball.

But he is no one-sport man: Baseball is for him too. He was signed by King Doring, then a scout for the St. Louis Browns, back in 1946. He moved up into Class AA minor league ball quickly, but in 1948 he took a drop into the Class D bracket in order to get into managing. As manager and all-around man on the Griffen (Ga.) Pimientos of the Georgia-Alabama League, Fred captured the league batting championship. This year he was with Austin in the Texas League.

Fred is married and has one daughter.

The Jacks play the Vagabond Kings here on Wednesday.

To bring this anti-aircraft gun into action calls for a full crew — skilled men trained to fight as a fast-thinking, fast-acting team. To train such a crew takes time: gun crews must know how to handle modern scientific equipment — electronics, radar, radio, telephone; men must work together with the closely timed co-ordination of a championship football team.

The Canadian Army Active Force needs men today... keen young men who can begin training immediately as anti-aircraft gunners. You can take your place at the side of the men who defend Canada by reporting for training without delay. Act now — and help make Canada strong.

The members in the Occupation Forces in Tokyo were greatly instrumental in helping open the Japanese mission. These members, some with families, from the United States and the Hawaiian Islands, were a testimony in themselves; to see the eagerness and earnest desire to help in the work of opening the country for the missionaries. They sheltered and provided us with the necessary things till our Mission Home was completed. During the first six months in Japan, I labored in one of the Districts in Tokyo, and outside of the usual crowded street cars and trains, the unfamiliar signs and the language barrier, we lived in comparative luxury.

In April of 1949 I was assigned to open the Hokkaido District, so with my companion I boarded the crowded Japanese train for Sapporo, Hokkaido with no idea where we would be spending the night we arrived at our destination, much less where we would live or get American food. It was a humbling experience, but the Lord provided us with the necessary things. We established ourselves, first in a Western style hotel and from there commenced our work. We interviewed the Editor of the City paper and gave him the story of our purpose and about the Church, and the next day the great news was published, that two young American missionaries had arrived in Sapporo, paying their own expenses and unfurling in the ministry, to establish God's Church in the City and elsewhere.

Soon after this, numerous phone calls and visits came in and for several days we were busy interviewing various influential City Officials, students, teachers and others. However, even with all these contacts we were not able to find a place to rent where we could do our own cooking. Day after day we walked the dusty streets trailing and looking for a place to rent and after about a month we found one; a large Japanese home into which, out of sympathy, the lady let us move. Sapporo was untouched by the war so the people were not humbled by its effect, and as it is the agricultural centre and the seat of the Hokkaido Government it is a haven for the great influx of repatriates from Russia and China who entered Hokkaido because it holds greater opportunities than the other parts of Japan. This great influx of people has made the housing shortage very acute.

"Rosenfeld claims that he has never read a book in his life, except in school." Never had time to read," he says. "Anyway, what can I learn from a book?" His newspaper reading except for a glance at Winchell's column is concentrated on clippings about himself and his dresses. He has never been out of the country and has no desire to go."

What is the moral of this if any? We have been thinking hard about it, and have put the question to several friends. The consensus is that the chance of anybody owning a million dollars at thirty-five is so slim that to try to achieve it by giving up books, magazines and newspapers would not be worthwhile. On the other hand if, by directing your whole life to one goal, you could make a million, would you do it? The conclusion was, no.

Notwithstanding, Rosenfeld, as presented by Lillian Ross, is a man of great ability and charm.

So until next week this is your Rote Reporter who wonders how come those who get their gossip second-hand seem to know more about what's going on than those who are the subject of the gossip?

For Parents Only

By Nancy Cleaver
Manners Do Count

Good manners have always been important and they still matter in modern life even as they did in the Age of Chivalry. Rules of etiquette change and are discarded with the passing of time. There are different codes of behaviour among different classes of society and in different countries. But the qualities of mind and heart from which courtesy arises remain unaltered. Parents who are eager that their children should grow into well-mannered people do well to consider not only rules of conduct and polite phrases, but the traits of character which are the foundation of etiquette.

An excellent definition for good manners is that they are "the happy way of doing things." Sincerity and fairness are two essential qualities in satisfactory contact with others. Self-control and respect both for others and for one's self also contribute to pleasant behaviour. A sense of humor is the thing which saves the situation many times. Last but not least, common sense often dictates what is the right thing to do.

A little child in the home copies the manners whether they be good or bad, of those around him. Courtesy, like measles is "catching". Formal teaching of rules is never a substitute for observation and experience in living. This does not mean that a child of courteous parents may not sometimes act in a rude fashion. A child who is ill, or frightened or exhausted may be discourteous and unco-operative. Sometimes a child acts in a boorish fashion in imitation of the actions of a chum. Once in awhile a child may do an unexpectedly rude thing as a bid for attention. Sometimes the best way to deal with rudeness is to isolate the child. At other times, it is wise to ignore some small discourtesy in front of a visitor, but discuss the child's behaviour later with him.

"Good manners" has a rather vague, impersonal sound to a youngster. But "being friendly" has a very definite meaning. A little child is often naturally shy in the presence of strangers and may feel no necessity for showing friendliness. The attitude of kindness to others is one which is gradually learned. Mothers cannot expect too much from a little child, but they can encourage a son or daughter to be friendly and suggest definite ways to show friendliness. Sometimes it is a good plan to make a little game of using courteous phrases such as "please" and "thank you".

As boys and girls enter adolescence they usually become more conscious of their own need for knowledge and practice in the correct way to behave in different social situations. The lonely, antisocial "teenager" is often acutely aware of his lack of training in social amenities. Teenagers need to have their own friends and be accepted by their own group of chums. A boy or girl hates to make a social blunder in the presence of the opposite sex.

A great help to feeling at ease in the presence of others is for boys and girls to have the chance to welcome friends in their own homes. Another real need is for a Youth Centre under satisfactory supervision where boys and girls in their teens can meet together for parties, discussions and sharing of hobbies and athletic interests. Manners (and morals too!) take care of themselves when adolescents have the chance to work and play together in a place of their own.
